

Scott Patt in NYC

6/23

scotpatt

scotpatt @ WW Winston Wächter Fine Art
June 24th-September, 2010 530 West 25th Street, New York

Scott Patt has been a body builder, missionary, strip club sketch artist and line-'em-up-and-knock-'em-down creative director. He's also an artist and surfer, and for the past five years he's been holed up here in the northeast, so we'll claim him as our own.

You may remember "Good Luck," his surf x Pennsylvania Dutch country + rabbit's feet art show we wrote about here in Portland at Corduroy. If that piqued your interest—and it should have—and you live in New York, you're in, ahem, luck! Scott has a new show opening this Friday, at Winston Wächter Fine Art in Manhattan (530 West 25th Street).

Works from a few of Scott's recent collections will be featured, including stays crunchy in milk, wormholes, good luck & good guys, bad guys. Cocktail reception with the artist to follow two weeks later.

If you can make it down a preview of the art is available at ScottPatt.com.

Winston Wächter Fine Art, June 24th-September, 2010, 530 West 25th Street, New York