

HOMES + DECOR

13 New York City Dining Rooms with Incredible Decor

In Manhattan, a proper dining room is a luxury to be celebrated with amazing interiors

By Melissa Minton

March 1, 2016

Photo: Miguel Flores-Vianna

1/13

New Yorkers are known for dining out at a plethora of amazing restaurants in the city, but these dining rooms would make anyone want to stay in. With their luxurious wall coverings, plush seating, and exquisite light fixtures, these stunning spaces make every meal feel like an extravagant feast, whether it's for a large dinner party or just an intimate gathering. We scoured the Architectural Digest archives for the chicest dining rooms in Manhattan.

Shown: In designer Jean-Paul Beaujard's dining room, the curtains are of a vintage fabric by Madeleine Castaing; the table is set with circa-1880 Viennese silver, a Russian opaline-glass centerpiece, and a Matouk linen cloth. The chairs are 1940s American.

Photo: Joshua McHugh

2/13

The dining area of an apartment designed by Desai/Chia Architecture, combines a custom-made Corian-top table by Kenneth Asmar Custom Interiors, 18th-century French chairs, and a grid of typographical prints by Christopher Wool.

Photo: Nikolas Koenig

3/13

De Gournay wallpaper sheathes the dining room in decorator Laura Santos's townhouse, where Hervé Van der Straeten light fixtures from Ralph Pucci International hang above a BDDW table and a suite of Paul Frankl chairs.

In the kitchen dining area of a home decorated by Delphine Krakoff, a Paul Evans table is accompanied by a Pamplemousse Design banquette, upholstered in a Holly Hunt fabric, and Erwine and Estelle Laverne chairs; the pendant light is by Tom Dixon, and the marble floor is by Exquisite Surfaces.

Photo: Miguel Flores-Vianna

Writer Brad Goldfarb and his husband, Alfredo Paredes—executive vice president and chief retail creative officer at Ralph Lauren—collaborated with architect Michael Neumann on the renovation of their duplex. They added double doors with arched transoms and a timber ceiling to the living/dining area, which features a table by Lucca Antiques, a suite of vintage Tolix chairs, and a Spanish wrought-iron lantern.

In the dining area of cosmetics guru Essie Weingarten's apartment, which was renovated by S. Russell Groves, side chairs by Anthony Lawrence-Belfair surround a bespoke Walter P. Sauer table; the light fixture is by Lampworks, the painting is by Tracy Rocca, and the rug is by Carini Lang.

Photo: Thomas Loof

7/13